Measure ___ imposes an ineligibility period of two years (one election cycle) to run for City Council on a person who has resigned from City Council. Currently, the Culver City Charter allows members of the City Council to serve two consecutive four-year terms for a total of eight years. It also allows a Councilmember who has "termed out" to run again for City Council after taking a break in service by sitting out one election cycle of two years. This proposed change closes an unintended loophole by treating a Councilmember who resigns from office the same as a termed out Councilmember who desires to run again. It fairly requires the resigned member to also have a break of service and sit out one election cycle of two years before being allowed to run again.
